This is as obvious as it gets but to achieve your goal as an accomplished and paid writer, there is one thing you must do, and that is write.

They say it takes 21 days to form a new habit, so today, we'll begin a sprint: 21 days of writing challenge.

The task is simple: Every day for the next 21 days, before bed at night or early in the morning, you will write no less than 300 words on any topic. Stuck on ideas? Reach out in the community and we'll send you writing prompts.

The goal of this challenge is to get used to writing clearly about what's on your mind. You don't have to worry about creating exceptional, riveting articles. It just has to be clear and maintain a train of thought.

Don't Break the Streak is a popular productivity concept by Jerry Seinfeld, and used by millions around the world.

Simply mark the days when you complete your goal with an 'X'. The accumulation of these X's, called Streaks, will drive you to keep learning, growing, and break through inertia. It is a straightforward concept that works wonders for those who commit to it.

So are you serious about writing? Get committed. You can find the Week of Saturdays Don't Break the Streak template on the first page. We have marked 21 days to get you started.
